

Higher Levels of Knowledge, or More False Certainty?

HP Hooded Cobra 666

December 19, 2021

Over the years, I have studied a lot of books, saw many "communities" and have happened to come across a lot of occult knowledge. Before I joined this place, I was making major research into all things to carefully consider where I was going to go.

Even in the JoS, there have been cases, where something overly simplified is stated to make things simpler. This excessive simplicity, can be a great thing - yet at the same time it can undervalue some knowledge.

The above is a necessity, and not the full nature of knowledge. We just have to do what we have to do.

Every time we had to update something or something was removed over the years, some people flipped out, as if this was the end of the world. A couple months later, after they tried it, they go like "Wow!".

Despite on if the updates were on exactly the same level of fundamental knowledge and of higher prospective knowledge, some people will always have something bad to say.

It could change their life and so on, but anything that is new comes with the same form for us. Even for those who are advanced, serious filtering of things is needed, so that behaviour is part of normal behaviour. So long it doesn't block everything.

People also want to be told strange nonsense like the New Age, such as "Believe into it and it will all happen", "The secret law of the universe is love!!" and other things like these. That is not actual spiritual knowledge. It's elementary and can only serve up to a very simple extent. It serves the simple-minded people only.

As knowledge advances, it does not become "simpler". We can simplify it, explain it or try to thin it down, but it does not become "simpler". It expands.

In the same way a hyper-computer starts understanding more and a calculator simply can't make the same connections, it is a similar case between people.

This "computer" is in a sense the human brain, the human mind, however you want to refer to this. If you understood now all the things you understood when you were 10, then existence is truly null and for no reason.

Some people have also told me before, that I might have "contradicted" myself based on what I said years ago. Not sure where [feel free to let me know where] but I would definitely know I am in the wrong path if everything was the same all the way after one, two or three years.

This is like telling a banker or an hedge fund manager, hey dude, ten years ago you had 10 billion dollars less. I thought this whole fund management thing was supposed to keep you at 10 bucks. Well, no, this is not the case.

I walk people towards the next grade, while showing you how to get to the next grade, then the next grade. The process is what matters as much as the destination.

It would be nice for me to retain a kindergarten, as it's less hassle, but seeing people in their 40's in the kindergarten, one has to be mentally ill to enjoy it. If anything, one has to be with the enemy, especially at times where crucial knowledge is required.

Regardless the enjoyment of this situation can be seen in every local church you find worldwide and in any religion. "Religion" in the strict sense that we know of today, preys upon the stupid, and does everything in its power to keep humanity limited.

When it comes to Dogma, ie, bullshit enemy religions, stupidity, stuckedness, nothing can ever be evolved out of anything. It's a desolate land, where there is no growth. It's the same stupid shit over and over again. Except of utterly stupid, the "books" of the enemy contain nothing of lasting value, nor anything interesting.

Dogma claims ineffability and unchangeability in all the levels of itself, from start to end. It was Islam that said it was the "Word of God", and therefore, what is said about Mohammed's 6-year old girlfriend, is something they cannot change. The earth is flat, nothing can change this, and nobody dare question the flying horse of Muhammed either.

They dub that nonsense also "truth" and believe it is of eternal value. Clearly it isn't, and it collapses instantly when analysis is made. Therefore, thought process of any kind in these "religions" is of the Devil and created by the Lord of Evil Himself. I digress.

The JoS works in a reverse way: We start from the Truth and then we grow in Truth. The foundation is firm, and the development firmer.

Remaining stagnant is not a good way to go about this. We want to stay in the stagnant states for a little time if at all.

In all the posts I make, I teach you a thought process, a way of opening up to the world or a thought process. Without this necessary rewiring, many people simply lose their path and revolve again around the same false notions that have led to stagnation in the first place.

How you know in this path you are walking correctly, is that every year you look back, you have gained more and more wisdom and knowledge, and understanding. Many years down, you look at yourself like a shrunk fly.

Eventually past a point, you will no longer believe where you were in the past. That is how you know you are walking properly.

If you look back at this path and you have learned nothing new, haven't gone deeper into any notion, and haven't grown at all in your mind, soul and life, then you need to apply further.

Eternal Truths or supreme knowledge, is also there and can be further evolve someone. That knowledge is also evolving, and from what is True, you can gain more and more knowledge. This is not dissimilar to physics. When you have the proper notions of physics laid down, then you can do more and more with them.

Lies on the other hand tend towards stagnation and death. In closing, the Pagan cultures allowed evolution. This was allowed insofar nothing fundamental was razed, since they built carefully only on Truths and not on false speculation.

To give an example, the stars on the heaven are as they are now, but a billion or two billion years from now, this might not be the case of Astrology any-more. Regardless, the concept of their analysis that this was based upon, can be moved to another solar system, another galaxy - and it would work all the same.

For those "disappointed" with opening my posts and having questions, and/or things that challenge your mind, and/or things that shake you out of a non thinking process, or from a negative process of not analysing anything at all, the issue remains when one remains falsely idle.

If we walk in this life and constantly have questions and we receive answers to move into next questions, then we are doing this correctly. If we are constantly in this stupid primitive loop that "we know everything", then we learn nothing any-more, we stagnate and die.

Nothing is a pain more in the ass for me than people who know "everything". The Gods likewise do not bother with people who know "Everything", since, what is there more to teach them?

Since these people know everything, you don't need to be here or read anything new. If one thinks everything has already been revealed, and you think that there is nothing else, then one is a God. Since that is most obviously a delusion, then one is a deluded being, since even the Gods do advance in the linear fashion of the word.

Spiritual Satanism is a path for learning, advancing, and growing. While we know many fundamental Truths and we are lucky to have a strong real foundation, it's expected for us to grow out of it, blossoming out of a seed.

This is what makes life worth living, and existence worth existing.