

It's Us Against the World

HP Hooded Cobra 666

June 27, 2017

Truly many of us have heard of this quote before, but how many times was it actually real? In our case, it is completely real. It's totally us against the world, and if there ever were any revolutionaries, it wasn't the funded communists, neither the Christians who fight their imaginary 'demons' all the time, for they rule this system as two sides of the same jewish coin.

In other words if someone wants to look for strong ideologies which have survived persecution, one needs to look no further than us. Considering the history of so many others is grossly exaggerated, we can understand their statements are in vain.

Satanism is really the most persecuted and hijacked 'ideology' of them all. It's not even an ideology basically. It's more like the perception of reality that most people have chased out of their life through jewish admission.

Secrecy is important for the Satanist. Muslims would gladly flail and behead us. About jews, there is no question with all the crimes they do. As for Christians, all it would take is an eventual push for them to get possessed as the zombies they are and get overtaken by their 'good faith' and 'good god' and raise a weapon against us to say. Then, as if these fools were not enough, we also have other invisible enemies.

Many people are also under the false impression that there are other sects of "Satanism". Maybe there are. The issue is, they, instead of fighting other enemies such as let's say the Christian church, are wasting their effort in fighting us more than once. This is because the Christian Church is actually a closer ally to them, because they affirm the same anti-christianity that the church needs to be going. And the church needs to exist so that these useless idiots will look as false 'renegades'.

So, it's always someone crying so far these people are concerned. Others because we have messed up their jewish empirical atheism, others because they act purely like animals, others due to base emotions like jealousy and the feeling of shrinking. We are the biggest, the most plentiful, and the greatest, and our people are the most devoted in spiritual advancing. They can't say the same.

Indeed also most political ideologies would also love to hang us, too. Let's not being up a conversation about Communists, either. As for friendlier ideologies or beliefs, such as the Pagans, we are basically a very similar if not the same thing but on a higher level. It's just we are initiated and deeper in, they are more on the simpler and tenderer aspects of the whole thing, focusing on the more recent.

Which is good and better than many other categories. Unfortunately, India, a place where the Gods still reign, wasn't free of jewish subjugation and watering down either, to the point many monks over there are working only to dissolve their existence and kill themselves into a void of nothingness. So, we kind of disagree here. The common thing however both the above categories have, is that they don't take an active spiritual stance or fight against anything.

We do.

In other words, we are the SS and many others are mere observers so to say. They just wait or at best create obstacles for people like us.

The more we grow and the more powerful we become, obviously, this attracts all sorts of weaklings, retards, and many others who just seek to suppress our work. Of course, nobody is left indifferent, and many people would assume we are fanatics or anything of that nature. Which is true. Our devotion to our beliefs is extremely focused, but that doesn't imply any negative or harmful aspect to ourselves and others. That is granted people raise a fist or something. Then we have to follow up likewise...

While all these people have the system, the established (((order))), the backups from all directions, we have annihilated many of them over the course of time. Annihilation of course here means survival and thriving against impossible odds, because yes, for many of us the odds are completely impossible, and for people like us to exist, this should puzzle (as it does) our enemies. But bear no mistake who upholds us: It is Satan.

Our fanatical devotion to Truth, spiritual understanding, and facing things that most people feel scared to even think about, has attracted equally the boldest allies with us, the Gods.

It's us against the world and we can win this. Just look on how much we have awakened people to problems, and this is only going to escalate. Bit by bit, things will actually change, but first and foremost it's ourselves that must change.

To all of the Satanic Family who fights for advancement and to uplift the world,
Onwards to even more victories!
HAIL FATHER SATAN!!!