As I have stated, yes, the virus does exist. You cannot lock down 2 billion people or more as time goes over absolutely nothing, nor just out of the window crash an economy, nor fool all the high IQ people like doctors worldwide, and all academics and research institutions [who are by the millions are looking into the situation], with something totally non-existent, all out of the blue. At least a percent like 10% would all have went out and gone ballistic about its non-existence.

The existence of it is nowhere close to justify any measures and other things happening, media chaos, 24/7 fearmongering, however, and no, it's not like the types currently residing in power suddenly got really caring all of a sudden for the people and wanted to save them from what they have effectively allowed to spread down to the last minute in most cases. Or purposefully due to exercised carelessness in others such as in the case of China.

Lots of meaningful posts and replies by many have been written before so those who may want to know more, do some reading around the forums.

The virus, however, is only a general situation allowing for other possibilities to emerge, these can be seen, the issues are more and where it's going, more complex. This is not merely about locking people in, it's a mass experiment, a test drive, a time through which numerous things are implemented, and all of these it is, at the same time. This has opened the gates for positive and negative things in the future, one of the negatives being, haphazard installation of 5G without any checking.

One thing in regards to 5G, this allows "behind the back and no protests" implementation. By the time people are out, many governments will have installed the major props of 5G without people even having the ability to accept or reject any of this. When people will be out it will already be a 5G world, with all the lacks of check in place.

People observed all sorts of things from 5G weeks in as it was installed, like killing bugs, birds, small animals, and causing all sorts of bad incidents. Israel will be going for a safer type of implementation, but Western Nations are going to implement "quickly" and with zero fucks given because of the policy of "We gotta do it cause of China and cause we need fast global surveillance Network like the kikes told us is necessary, getting told by the greys", type of stupid stuff.

A lot of people in Wuhan were probably affected by this, but the issues of 5G and the virus appear to be two ongoing problems in their own way.

5G in the long term will be worse than the virus because it will slowly and with cloaked issues cause, by itself, all sorts of weird complications, both for privacy, and for many other things. By the time the virus situation will have subsided, 5G will be just taking the baby steps into the experiments and implementations that are to happen with it.

If Governments followed the 5G implementations on a low scale, we would be in no danger. But they certainly will not. This is what this virus situation proves. They will not hesitate to probably weaponize this thing either, nor they will hesitate to use the 5G to install facial recognition cameras and make the world worse than China.

This is also to replace fundamental freedoms such as the ability to go where you want without being in a state of permanent surveillance, with forced implementation of self-driving cars, etc. All of the nine yards is promoted as "Cool, futuristic", or even as a "future that would come anyway and that's just the way it is", but in the reality of things, this is only an alien and reptilian concoction that is made to appear this way and marketed like this to the masses, because the reality of how they will exist under this system will be far more severe.

People get a taste of this now, with the currently issued global quarantines. Only in the future, this will be nothing compared to this. In the future, maybe the "system" will lock you inside your house for your own safety. If you have been a bad goyim [or even if someone in an IT room wants to have a laugh at you, even if you were the perfect goyim all your life, who knows], maybe your fridge will lock and you will not eat, and if your social rating drops too low, maybe you will not be able to be sold any food. If someone is given food by someone, the 5G grid will be able to in real time locate where the food transaction took place. The day after, the person that gave the food to the "rebel" and "evil dissident" may just have their own social rating down, or they may just disappear in some drone shoot-out.

People think the above sounds a lot like a movie, but why? Because indeed, these have been predictive programming done in novels and movies for decades now. China is only one step away from implementing the above in full severity. In the West, we are now preparing to enter this circle where things will be really serious.

5G in itself is not necessarily the devil, it is a technology of general purpose, it's about its implementation, use, and at what frequency and power it will be worked on. But in the hands of the enemy, this will definitely be used nefariously and be one step further into the general "turn them into sick borgs and try to profit" greater scheme of affairs.

On another level, the 5G constitutes other dangers as it's unclear what will be built further and in the future ON TOP of the 5G grid. The global "real-time" surveillance network and potential mind control network is not a conspiracy theory, this can be achieved through 5G or technologies which already exist but could be easily and secretly be implemented on top of the abilities the 5G can provide.

This opens the way for more systems like the Chinese system, such as internet control, digital currency system, "social ranking system" that runs in real time, finding targets in real time, deploying small scale AI to break down freedoms, mass bots, fast information absorption for AI to function for some intended purpose, and the plan to unite all appliances in the "Internet of things", for reasons primarily of privacy invasion and mass control. Even fridges now have cameras. As if a fucking fridge now needed a 'camera' and to be connected to Facebook. That is also only the very tip of the iceberg with where this situation will go.

Clearly it's of no military or otherwise any major importance for a fridge to literally listen to you, and if you want google, and one is so bored and dumb that they want to vocally give the command for their machine to make pop corn, there are other ways to do this, and certainly so without any internet connectivity whatsoever.

But internet connectivity is required as part of the largest plan of the powers that be, which are influenced by the greys, in implementing that structure for things that only if they understand their ends, they would be scared themselves and stop their implementation today. The greys have a large scale plan for this, that most people wouldn't currently imagine. Turning the world into a "grid" is necessary for them for mass implants that are controlled in real time, without the possibility of human escape. This has also nothing to do with "connected"-ness or anything like that, that the stupid masses are told it has to do with.

If we were so afraid of the military part vs China, the 5G could only be implemented in the military structures, as with civilians, most are perfectly fine with the internet speeds already attained as is [these can be doubled or tripled without any implementation of 5G if desired, and 5G is not the only forced way to do this, fiber optic has insane capabilities and this can be easily combined with already existing WIFI technology], even if this has to do with nonsensical things such as "virtual reality".

Virtual reality for the greys is necessary so that human beings will eventually give out and forsake any actual spiritual practice, in essence, driving them to an insignificant digital world, not different from the movie "The Matrix", in which the AI or the powers that be exercise infinite power over subjects 24/7 in a case where they do not possess any free will, but live in sloppy digital landscape.

The spiritual level is something that has an existence and is valid everywhere, people larping in a video game doesn't affect the reality of the cosmos in any way, just 1 and 0 in a server somewhere. This isn't also for kids to be able to play fun games, making the case of making pop corn easier and vocal with Internet devices, it's about other and deeper goals certain circles have in mind.

An oligarchy [and after stage an alien oligarchy] requires these means in order to completely control over the masses without any ability of the masses to ever break out. Hunger games and related movies are then to ensue, if not worse things. The rest is just advertising and byproducts to get people to accept this or sit back and let this unfold.
