

Dedication and Devotion to Father Satan

Most people give nonsense excuses about their dedication Ritual. The reality of this is that this is an introduction, a statement of seriousness, a pledge.

This is the start of a love, like one's heart just connected, it clicked, one is here. This is like the beautiful day when one finds their long awaited love, in a sense. But then, what is one ought to do?

Proceed in on with what this love will be and is about, one is meant to walk. Here, this form of love is not a form of forced obligation; we walk to this to improve ourselves, not out of coercion and pain. But if we do not, then we fall lesser to what it could have been.

We make this "it could have been" by our decision in progression, rather than degeneration.

Pledges and oaths are as good as they are followed. Dedication means to dedicate yourself to something, and to follow it. The pledge exists, but what has one truly pledged?

The path of the map exists, but has one walked? And has the giving of the map shown itself to be worthwhile? As a gradual process, we have to walk. Then we might fall, and then we walk again. The difference in people is not in those that will not fall, but those who will raise up and keep walking.

Infinite excuses do not cut the deal. On one day there is one excuse, and before you know it, a million other excuses.

Similarly, there are a lot of thoughts to keep you from doing the correct thing, and walking the path of Truth. It's exactly the same in regards to emotions.

As a devoted son, a devoted daughter, and a devoted parent to their kids, one must show devotion in dedication.

We are loved as much as we love in Spiritual Satanism, maybe way more: but the more we love, the more we are loved. When dedication crosses the path of devotion, this is where we cross our threshold to our true path, and not before this.

As obstacles come, it is our devotion that helps us overcome them. And as we overcome them, we are rewarded with the fruit of this devotion.

In the end of the day, or one's life, what one dedicated one's self to and their devotion is what will remain and its outcome. It is what you take back with you in life and in death, it is the closest part of who you are. Foolish are the ones who do not understand it, for through this we can call ourselves devotees of Satan, and make our dedication proven.

Proud and happy, beyond everything is where we can reach only through this path and the true devotion to it. Our excuses come to our graves with us, so make sure to take your devotion to your heart, soul and future instead.

We ought choose the blessing, and not the pathway to ignorance.
