Nietzsche knew the nature of the Jew unlike most of his time. In universities and university studies, they are like "Haha, he was a madman and a very bad, dark writer". But from what I have read of him, he has had a very sharp, clear and strongly Gentile consciousness, from which he gathered valuable info. He trod very far for not being an SS, very, very far. This is why personally I respect him very much. I respect his effort and his penetrating thoughts. In fact, he analyzed the Jews very, very accurately. Also, I have heard that Nietzsche believed in reincarnation and that lives repeat themselves due to energies that bind us as beings- which is True if he actually said it.

It's not a coincidence the Third Reich took his writings seriously and that according to most scholars, he played a role in actually shaping the ideology of Nazism. Nietzsche was a genius and he is getting very defamed, especially because he in the end kind of lost it with his health. Some as always Jews, attribute this to insanity, that basically his own theory caused. Same bunk-shit level as the 'psychological mapping of Adolf Hitler'. Jewish yunkjunk 'psychology', 'philosophy' and 'answers'. Worthless of the most worthless cheezen ones.

Our society has become so confused people are starting to believe that good and evil don't exist anymore. It's just a man-made concept or such. Most of this is a reaction against the confusion of morality and moral principal by Christianity and its assorted programs. One confusion is not corrected by adding in another. And we have the fact psychopathology is becoming the approved and rewarded behaviour socially. Such garbage as Social Darwinism and Libertarian gospels are a sure mark of this exaltation of this and the downfall of society by hacking away at the organic bonds of it further. They twist the knife in the wound, Christianity stuck in the West from the start.

Such false concepts as all morality being a man-made construction. Are out the window as science understands openly that morality is actually intrinsic. Thus, naturally occurring from within the soul. And it's a natural microcosm of the eternal principal of creation which is built upon an order of the highest realm. Which when applied to the human dimension is called morality. Nietzsche already solved much of this question in his time. And it's not what most think as they never actually read his work. Just believed the twisting of it by Jews who bank off the fact the Goyish slobs are too lazy to read and think about it. And just repeat like sheep. If the Goyish slobs actually read Nietzsche, they might wake up the Jews.

The fact their even needs to be a debate on morality proves my point.

As for the bickering over Harry Potter. I never read the books. But I ended up watching some of the films. Its full of subtle enemy themes. But it got a whole generation inserted in the Hermetic arts. So, it's a glass half empty and full situation.
