

The Most Common Mistake

HP Hooded Cobra 666

I notice people do a mistake over and over again. One portion of people severely underestimates the jews and the enemy. This comes from never having actually crossed them, and merely fighting them in one's own mind.

Then, we have overestimation of the enemy. Which is sometimes people fighting their own weaknesses, and therefore, by falling in their own rut, they assume that the enemy is very powerful. Symptoms of this also make in the end people that obsess solely on the enemy.

There are also other people who instead of focusing on the Gods and Satan, they dwell a lot on the enemy, for example. The enemy is to be attacked, defiled, and destroyed. Not to be focused upon. When you are done with destroying them, shut them off like a radio.

Satan is far more powerful than the enemy, but we live in a system where the influences of the Gods show up harder because there are blocks created by people. Sometimes the blocks are also internal in every individual. This needs yearly work (or at least persistent) until it's taken out of the self. This can take a while since indoctrination is since birth.

Then, we have false association. Many people are becoming very paranoid about some things. Their pancake falls on the floor, it must have been the greys. That's ok, as the mind is trying to make sense of the new conditions and interconnect them, but some people stay for more time in this state than necessary.

If people keep thinking in this theme, they are going to create this theme. This can quickly make someone overestimate the enemy. And can be highly damaging for themselves. Same as people who don't give one shit about the enemy, as if they do not exist. Therefore, they are destroyed by them.

There has to be a healthy balance.

"By deception thou shall wage war". This is the motto of the jews. The jews take something that would happen anyway, is Karma, or a mistake of the person, and they tell them they did it. So the person overrun by this issue, they assume that it was them.

This is, for example, what a hate group of brain-dead cockroaches tried to pull out a few weeks ago, that they 'cursed the JoS'. These people cannot curse a toothpick so far I am concerned. I mean, they can't do anything at all. The ones who really pull these things, remain unseen, and so they want to remain, because they know retaliation can come. This comes from how they know about the damage they try to do. This is only one example.

In closing this post, focus on the Gods and Satan. The jews have had a transient rule. They are very dangerous, and if left unattended, yes, it's over. Plain and honest in this thing. If, however, people keep fighting, advancing, and calling the Gods in their heart, life and mind. The jews will not succeed.

This is reaching a funny point where even the enemy knows how strong Satan is, but his own followers, they haven't really understood it. The jews avoid cursing the Gods face to face, and so many have died from it. They knew a war like this was futile, but they did whatever they could.

Instead of people focusing on the 'power' of the enemy, take most of this time to focus on your own power and on the powers of Satan. Satan is the God of "This" World, and all Worlds combined. When the mind understands it, the mind grows stronger and at ease. Confidence is grown, and this inspires action. This inspires war, and victory.

Lastly, trust in the Gods and tune to them instead. This is where most of your focus should be going. This is where one grows and becomes better. Your focus on the enemy should be to be aware of them and destroy them, watchfully. Not anything else than that. Devotion and tuning in should happen towards the Gods and Satan. They are wonderful beings.

As for the shit and their dead flies over it, we will deal with it as we go. I know they are attention whores and they try to get your attention at all costs, but just let it go, and just fight them and don't dwell on them otherwise.
