

Hong Kong is Teaching Us

The situation in Hong Kong is that Hong Kong exists within a nation that is essentially an Orwellian dictatorship with full military power, information control upwards to a 99.98%, no freedom of speech, a ranking system that ranks citizens like cattle and imprisons people for accidentally passing on a wrong street light.

All surrounded by the control and the military of said nation, with nowhere to really escape to. People over in China two blocks away from the border don't even know what is going in to Hong Kong thanks to the Great Firewall of China.

In China what is also happening is that except of punishments from crimes, and Sauron's Communist Eyeball looking at you 24/7, and by "you", we don't mean "you" amongst other people, but "YOU" as an individual human being numbered within a ranking system. In other words, one is being constantly 'evaluated' by those in power of whether or not one is a good citizen, and if one is not, they find themselves either punished or in the public board of shame, where they are shamed for an extended period of time, depending on what kind of crime they have committed.

The whole thing about the Chinese, the whining on Huawei's "Spying" and all the related, is that the Chinese are doing in more grotesque manner, what the NSA and other agencies have been doing casually for at least 60 years. The moral panic on this is that by miracle, in the West, we still don't get every door busted for every comment written online just yet, and that there is no public board of shame.

But this is the only thing that is yet to happen in the West. Everything else is rapidly happening - people are already dragged into courts for 'offensive posts' in Facebook, or because they made the wrong meme, which was seen by like 10 people online.

Indeed, we have lost our ability to speak our minds online within the context of our own societies. This started from the supposed "Far right" and now has consumed virtually the whole Right wing. Even the most mediocre, idiots of the system, are being absorbed into this and thrown under the bus, totally unpersoned. In all respects they experience exactly what a dissident would experience in China, minus the beating until their brain leaves out of the skull. But don't worry, the generations they have infested with violent Marxism will make sure we're getting there sooner or later, unless they are stopped in their tracks.

The last generation which has some perception of the "Red White and Blue" and knows what a "Constitution" is, is slowly giving in to a Marxist rainbow color mob that has no consciousness other than infinite gib and throwing it's political opponents off of wheelchairs, as they proudly did to a disabled person not long ago. This is how upright and strong these people are. It took 5 Marxist apes to take down a single person from a wheelchair with an opinion that was "right wing" in a video that leaked months ago.

The strength of the Marxist mob however was never in its straight forwardness, honesty, or any other form of redeemable quality. They always were natural subversive elements, no different than ticks and other viruses, and since logical points always escaped them, public discourse, or military confrontation, are things they always hated. It's a well-known fact the Soviet Union was totally cucked and in shrieking fear from a retaliation from the Western countries such as the United States. So, they invested all their powers instead in subversive, large scale propaganda, to take out the West from the inside. What they always loved is slimy and aggressive propaganda, it's a historical documentation here.

In regards to all things that China is being blamed [and rightfully] about, in regards to surveillance, mass control, and the related, all of this exists privately and below the radar, but we aren't that far behind the Orwellian obvious dictatorship. It's just that now those holding the radar such as mega companies, are merely fed up and they feel like this grip is being challenged, so we have obvious crackdowns in the West. As far as the invisible aspect of this is concerned, with NSA coupled with Israel and a few other countries, the situation is far gone. China is a child when it comes to this, it's just the Chinese are far blunter in how they have gone about it, because they are Communists and they don't want to keep a false pretext going and try to deceive by appearances.

The appearances game in the West is also starting to become obsolete, and the enemy is losing their patience. This is why you have such brutal and obvious censorship now, because they feel like they are getting nowhere, this has to happen for their agenda to advance. Yet, due to the nature of the Western World and it's founded ideals, the yids cannot go full throttle like the Chinese [just yet] to impose on the West what the people in Hong Kong are now revolting about, which is a military/industrial/information/legal complex of total dictatorship.

In the West we now have the Industrial complex ready [notice how industries like Youtube censor free speech, or how Twitter and others claim to be "private companies", aka, they can do as they see fit, and the same goes for Google], we have the Information complex which is already in place [Surveillance and espionage], and what remains is the total corrosion of the Legal system, and then to bring in the military and to connect all of this.

Indeed we may be better off than Hong Kong, but we are accelerating towards the same direction. Due to the clauses of malforming the minds of people politically, the same minds behind states like China, i.e., Communists, have devised propaganda and warfare on the West for many decades.

The West was bound to lose this war the moment it began, as simply, Communists have an advantage in information war by default, since they are radicals, and since their nations are propaganda machinery focused only on one specific thing, while their enemies are "Open societies" and espouse values of "Freedom", which allow them to be infiltrated, subverted, and malformed.

Now there are some people in Hong Kong, and they know the Chinese Sauron state knows everything about them their phones are bugged, and that they may possibly die from what they are doing. It's also known and obvious that the United States is also behind the Hong Kong revolts, and indeed, this is not being hidden, but quite expected. However, we on ourselves aren't really that better, but the fact that other people come to help to us for freedom, should make us understand a few things or two.

For one, the Chinese people have been subjected to what America was sworn to fight for many decades. Now, you have strange people espousing Communism and wearing the hammer and sickle, and legitimately believing that this is a great way to go about their lives. Endless historical examples did not suffice apparently, not even the fact their own country opposed Communism more than any other country, and gives them, faults aside, the best quality of life worldwide.

It's insane that people over in Hong Kong apparently understand the words of "Democracy" and "Free Speech" more than some entitled kid in an American University, that literally wants to censor evil people who offended their emotions.

We have to protect our freedoms and Hong Kong is teaching us this very thing.

We can also see the beginning of what is going to happen if we don't, in China.

China at this point has managed to become an example to avoid in regards to any sort of freedom, it's a nation which is escalating further than Orwell. It should be used as a measure on how much our own democracy is failing. And the more years go by, it's not like we are moving away from this example, but drawing closer and closer to it.

The Chinese police of thought, we have the ADL for this. The Chinese censorship media we have Youtube, Twitter, Facebook, the list goes. The databases of people being profiled, we have Facebook again. Exactly as the Chinese state has fake news outlets that keep people ignorant, we have BBC, CNN, MSNBC, and all the related outlets, owned and serving specific interests. In regards to the social ranking system of China, we don't have a "Board of Shame", but we have all sorts of punishments for people who dare to speak their mind.

The Chinese 0.1% of claimed elites are on our end of the world the Jews, one is not allowed to criticize, and who use all the above means to keep the population enslaved. In regards to the hit squads, these aren't yet quite formed, but it's happening, we have the Anti-Fa and numerous other subversive elements. The re-education camps in the West are not required as the Jews have ensured every church, university, and place of learning, is as it in essence such center as it is, breeding people that are literally instructed to ruin the nations that gave them life and freedom, in contrast to even their own interest.

The fact we aren't full China is a good thing, but we aren't far off either. And as people in Hong Kong today have stopped giving a fuck and they are burning the place alive, every person in a position of power who is not insane should ask themselves what is going to come of these modern plantations when a people who has been instructed or at least learned a time of freedom, is exposed to said dictatorship.

Any reasonable leader or citizen should understand the Communism and China-ization process has to reverse itself right now, before it is too late and all the world we have built is going to burn into ashes. In the very same way some people in Hong Kong have stopped giving a fuck about all the industrial and military complex that wants to enslave them, so will people soon do that in the West, ran over by illegal migration, abject poverty or financial stuckedness, and to put a cherry on the pie the inability to even vent their lungs about it online.

The good news is that the more the West is being moved towards the China-ization process, the more enemies to the subversive Communist minded folk are created, eventually only digging their own hole, like Stalin, Trotsky, and many other said individuals have done in history. Indeed, they are doing everyone a favor by what they are doing. They are creating freedom aware citizens who will not care about torture, death, or any other form of penalty falling upon them. They are creating freedom fighters who will go the extra mile without any fear, in contrast to how this was done before the crackdowns, which was the "slow boiling of a frog".

Indeed, the more evident this process becomes, it may be more trying, but it's all in the end for the better, so people should not despair. We could avoid all of this while we have the time, and before the time of no return, which is approaching more and more when nothing is being done.

Is our world ready to pay the backfire of such events? Why do we even have to go down this hole as a world or as a society? Simply because the jews said so?

Do we want our Western world to become in the future only a giant Hong Kong, fighting a revolutionary and maybe hopeless war towards enslaving behemoths?
