There are some idiots who equate Christianity with True Paganism (Spiritual Satanism) over the mere fact there are some stolen symbols present in Christianity. Which shows the belief of Hitler to be very important, we must practice eugenics, as the IQ of the people in this world is dropping drastically. To the level of swine.

The argument here is that if let's say there is a Ancient Greek Myth of Hercules fighting with Dragon Ladon, or because Thor fought the primordial Serpent, the Christian rhetoric that is built around "Killing the Dragon" is exactly the same thing, and that since a similar myth exists in other Pagan religions, it must be some sort of 'continuity of some myth'.

This was the hardest lie that the church wanted to create, that somehow, the coming of Christianity in the world and in Europe, wasn't some alien thing that was based on jewish hate, rape of people, and blood and terror, but it was sort of like a peaceful transition to the loving hands of Jewish Rabbi Christ. The Middle Ages testify to such love.

We can simply understand how this can be fallacious: One can say "I love you" to someone, and inwardly, their intention can be to kill them. Another can say "I love you" to someone, and truly mean it. The fallacy here is that one confuses the symbols because they have zero understanding of the meanings and the context of said symbols.

This is the foundation of Christardianism. To not know what one is looking at.

In other words, these blind people compare visages as projected in the Platonic cave, and they say that each image they see is actually the 'same', because its visage looks like the same. They are blind and foolish. This is like saying that if there is poison that looks like water, it has to be water, and that it's the same thing, simply because it "LOOKS" like this.

Let's be simple now. We have two shops that promise you they are selling food. One simply shows you a picture of a dish filled with shiny food, and it never delivers. It just keeps promising you more and more cheeseburgers in the middle of desert Nevada. Then you die of starvation. This is Christardianism, an obsession over symbols that seldom one understands, let alone applies any meaning.

Christians don't even care about symbols, they just want to pretend, as if they have purposefully put a strong down syndrome on themselves, that they are in the "WAY TO SALVATION" simply because someone told them about it, simply because they worship some corrupted symbol, or the image of an image. And even the symbols are jewish and infested with such jewish meanings. The fact that the image of a cheeseburger resembles it, doesn't mean it can be eaten, let alone that one must worship such image.

Christians always rant and rave about idols, yet little they see that they are worshipping a human made idol: jesus christ. Christ is nothing but an idol, an idol that demands their life, their worship, and blind servitude to such idol, to deliver them to a 'promise'.

The Christians however are empty. They are fine with simply looking at the picture of food and never eating. This is a very obvious statement as if they were really HUNGRY and THIRSTY for knowledge; they would go to this projected image and understand it's all a crock of crap. What separates the Christian from anyone else is that truly, the christian, does not want to know - he thinks he does, so it's all fine.

True Paganism (Spiritual Satanism) only uses symbols as a quick interval to get you to understand something. In other words, one doesn't spend their whole life praising an engineering plan that is never manifested, or the image of a cheeseburger they will never eat (Salvation). But one is not only given such, but they have to learn how to feed themselves and dig holes in Nevada to find water.

Indeed, in an even desolate region such as the world we live today, devoid of any spirituality, and filled with visages, Spiritual Satanism provides a direct route for people to advance spirituality and self- discover.

One has to become thirsty in order to long for water, and in the same way, those who are really thirsty and hungry for the Truth, will find Spiritual Satanism and will reach their own spiritual ascendance.
