

Family Values in Normal Life and Spiritual Satanism

HP Hooded Cobra 666

July 02, 2021

Nowadays, everything fundamental to life is being attacked, questioned, and in general, subverted by the enemy. The questions against it are not asking for answers, but only to destroy the thing they pose the answers to.

The above was called "deconstruction school" of Marxism, and is a deliberate plot to destroy every past [Gentile Pagan] value system.

It takes little mind to understand that this is all very wrong. Yet, because most people no longer undergo a natural or decent psychological evolution, they cannot understand how things in life relate.

We live in a crazy world and that would be an understatement. All natural values and everything that brought power, freedom, advancement, is being besieged. People are instructed in the worst things that decay their power, remove their freedoms, and do them the greatest damage, but they are told this is for the best.

One of these corrosive advices and perceptions is an adverse one towards one's family, or making a family, or being part of a family.

Yet, because this world is as it is, the family ethos turning negative, because people suck on a personal level, has become a self-fulfilling prophecy - most people, especially awake, aware, or smart people, might experience suffering from the family.

The reasons why the family suffers so much, range from financial to emotional, to social reasons. Above all, forsaking the advice and tenets of our ancestors, who were good with family building, we have been lost entirely.

An example here is, that Romans and others in the past, had a "leader" in the family, a "leader" of wisdom. This would be the wisest or the oldest person in the family [and therefore more experienced] that would organize the family, help make amends between members of it, and look for supplicating it with wisdom. This would be either a grandparent or a grandmother.

As with anything else, modern man has rejoiced a lot in being a lonely lost creature without a purpose, and assuming this is the best state of being. It is pointless to try to explain anything to, for example, a club lost slut or something.

Families are groups where organic relations between people of the same blood [in theory] take place. The larger Race, is part of extended racial family. The reasons why people flock together in this manner, is biological first and foremost. It's to satisfy needs, increase power of members, provide nurturing and protection. These bonds are kept together through the blood, ancestry, common goals etc.

Because none of this exists anymore, most families are built on social promises, and lack of awareness doesn't help much more. There is no real "family feeling" in most families, and most parents are not gaining necessarily more wisdom as they grow, therefore causing issues to children. Children on the other hand, lacking experience and understanding of life, blame the parents, and the list of wrongs can have no end here.

The family value of the world is getting besieged, because nobody wants people to have any such exclusive bond to anyone else. In essence, we are too hated here because we constitute a form of a spiritual brotherhood, which is close to that of a family. This empowers everyone involved, far more than they would be powerful on their own.

The family is one of this world's most precious things. It's family values that have been completely been destroyed by the enemy. There are none of these today.

In a world where everyone is misguided, parents will be too. Parents will misguide the children. As you were misguided, and everyone was. Power can be used in a wrong way, and families can do that also.

Nowadays, it comes at a cost because to awake, is a crime in general, and therefore the people that might respond negatively to this might even be your family. The enemy can use these people to get to you, and they might comply, because especially families are so fragmented by ideological or religious issues. These did not exist in the Pagan past.

Family is not a prison camp. Family exists to save a person from the already existing dependence relationships, and make sure someone grows during these in a protected environment. There is no "free" toddler thrown in the jungle, but a toddler can be free if they are on the hands of a family that takes care of them.

There are no natural rights to any freedom inbred in a young human being, as there is also no power, as this manifests more as a person grows later on. Family has to protect from this powerlessness. Yet many families do throw the children more feet under at this point.

Family is a protective cocoon for this, to protect the future of both the family and the life. Now, our world cares little about all this, and many are totally dumb and on a self-destructive spiral, so understanding or applying any of this will be a pain to them.

It's the people that grow you, give you life, brought you to this world, and yes, they can make some really grave mistakes on you, and not make you into the intended king everyone thought was entitled to be, in this day and era.

Most people think of course why didn't everyone serve them better, because everyone is a princess today. Nobody ever asks if they could do better themselves, that is getting more and more rare. Therefore, families, which are a basic co-existence mechanism, do suffer from these imbalances.

What do people do if life befalls them hard and they have to retreat? They go live with their otherwise "toxic" parents.

Who do people run to the moment something really bad happens? Oftentimes, even to their parents, if they aren't as toxic or as judgmental.

The list goes.

Parents are nice when they grow you and they give you everything, then what nowadays people do is remember the negative things only and discard their family on the trash can. Very noble of them? No, that is very selfish and not noble.

Parents do also take a choice or a situation where they minimize their own freedom, sacrifice their years, and so on, to give rise to a child. This is not only biological, but a sacrifice that happens on one's self out of love, necessity or care.

Because whomever grows a child enters a very limiting relationship with major sacrifices to themselves, to raise children, so they can tell them to fuck off later, as many children will do because of whatever demand came into their head?

Well yes, this is how it goes, until you are young that is. Then you start understanding more about this world, unavoidably.

Nowadays, women are told to avoid this, and to just take another way entirely in this world. They therefore never discover the power incumbent in motherhood in anyway. They think this makes them stronger. This illusion collapses as women reach very old age, where they don't have anyone to take care of them. The same goes for men.

As I see this world going, depression, stupid values, and many other things, will drive it to the cliffs of loneliness, depression, and in the end, possibly self-destruction. Many people will defend this state of being until it is too late, simply because they didn't know a better perspective here.

In regards to children, children can be wonderful, fill one's life with joy, worry, longings, hopes for the future. They are not the monsters people have been told they are. They will do more positive to you than negative. If you raise them with love, understanding, discipline and support, your children will be where you will rely in your own future as a being. This is a give and take situation.

Everyone is being LIED to about family, because they want people in the West to simply die without a family, alone and unsupported. They want people to be pointlessly only selfish, and incapable of relating to other human beings. Much of this is learned in one's early family.

Parents and children do share in these relationships and therefore in the wrong and right of things. Children grow and many are growing selfish which is natural, and they therefore only increase their demands, while doing nothing.

Family is an organic bond and most people cannot have these bonds as most people are egoistical princesses in this day and era, and know nothing of sacrifice, stepping back, or anything of the sort.

There is no life currently known that goes out from the child state. Children are helpless, little beings, that cannot do much in life. This is biological. Family comes as their armor to grow them and protect them. Everyone has been a child at some point.

The argument that some people may have underwent negative experiences, gives credence to what stated above: Our world sucks. It will be fixed in time. Will these disappear completely? No. But family will have a far higher standing in Satanism or in a Spiritually Satanic, aka, Pagan world.

For Satanic Souls, because one has a bigger past and/or may be wiser, there can be clashes with the less intelligent people in one's family. These can come out of one's difference, one's decisions, or many other factors. We are a marginal few people in these very peculiar situations, and these cannot be turned into universal law for all mankind.

Currently, the price of awakening and consciousness, is severing from many things that are normal, even loneliness. This will not be the case "forever" in the future, it's a temporary lapse of civilization going to shit. In fact, these traits were most desirable in the past for families, relationships, politics, what have you. It's only now that these morals have been inverse.

In these cases, people have all means if they want, to amend ties, stand on their feet, not tolerate abuse, form their own family, the list goes.

Now, if your parents are decent people, go give them a kiss, and give them a hug, and tell them a thank you and that you love them despite of anything. Call them on the phone even, or send them a text. They were not perfect as you aren't perfect, but they tried.

If they are total assholes, then one might as well get them to fuck off. Yet, consider to be the parent that your children are going to love, because this is something you can choose for yourself, as Spiritual Satanism will make you in control of your own destiny.

There is a reason why many refer to Father Satan as "Father", and this is a holy title. The same goes for Mother, which some describe as Lilith, others Astarte and so on.

Family is sacred, beautiful, and divine. A human with a great family is a blessed human.

© Joy of Satan Ministries
www.joyofsatan.org

Reply from [slyscorpion]:

“The family system often is a slave system. A bunch of people forced to be together that would have nothing to do with each other were it not for the current system and people grow to resent each other’s existence cause of this. It becomes a master slave type relationship. It is like a prison camp for kids in their own eyes the ultimate goal becomes later to heal and deprogram from all this and become free again later in life and find yourself and your life path again.

While yes we have to go along with things at a certain age I cringe a little when seeing "don't break family relationships over this" cause from what I have heard that is exactly what will happen with something else later for many of these same people your talking too that were forced to get this vaccine.”